Brief syllabus: The theoretical study of Hungarian literature is a special and very important field. During the 19th and 20th centuries great theoretical and historical changes appeared in the field of world literature and also in the Hungarian literature. The positivist tendencies and the marxist ideology greatly influenced the development of Hungarian literature. Due to both of them, new research methods (like comparative literature) appeared. The purpose of this course is the examination of all these changes, the clarification of the literary history of our present age, and the examination of our literary history from the viewpoint of the Hungarian minorities.
