Prerequisites:
Conditions for passing the subject: The student must attend lectures in accordance with the applicable study regulations (see Article 8. Organization of Educational Activities of the Study Regulations of J. Selye University). During the semester, he/she must take and successfully write 2 written tests on Practical Knowledge of the Old Testament 1. Their average will determine the final grade. In the sub-discipline of New Testament Theology, students must take and pass 2 written tests, and at the end of the semester students will also take an oral examination. In the sub-discipline of Biblical Seminar 1, students must submit written assignments. Evaluation of written tests, written assignments, and oral exam responses are evaluated in accordance with the syllabus (See Art. 10 Control of study and evaluation of learning outcomes of the Study Regulations). Ecclesiology Attendance at lectures in accordance with the SJE study regulations. Active participation in lectures and involvement in joint work. Regular preparation during the semester. Successful completion of a written test and an oral examination at the end of the semester. Successful completion of end-of-semester examinations in the sub-courses that make up the course. Assessment: Assessment of the sub-courses will be by means of sub-examinations according to the following assessment: A - excellent (numerical value: 1) - outstanding performance (90-100%), B - very good (1.5) - above average performance (80-89%) C - good (2) - average performance (70-79%) D - average (2.5) - acceptable performance (60-69%) E - fair (3) - minimum performance (50-59%) FX - unsatisfactory (4) - further training required (0-49%) The course grade is based on the average of the grades awarded in the sub-courses according to the following rounding system: A = 1,00 - 1,25 B = 1,26 - 1,75 C = 1,76 - 2,25

D = 2,26 - 2,75

E = 2,76 - 3,00

FX = 3,01 - 4,0

Results of education:

Knowledge - skills-attitudes:

By successfully completing the course, the student will gain a detailed knowledge of the contents and structures of old- and new-testament books.

By using the Content Method of each book of the Old and New Testaments (personalities, stories, and major theological emphases) and memorizing selected verses for some key events, the student will be able to apply the knowledge gained in practice.

The student will be able to introduce others to the history of salvation in the Old and New Testaments.

Ecclesiology

Acquisition of basic theoretical knowledge in the field of ecclesiology - the nature of the church, the concept, understanding, origin and life of the church in the Old Testament, in the New Testament, in early Christianity, in ecumenical and Reformed denominations, in the Catholic Church and in Protestant churches.

The student will acquire the ability to integrate the basic concepts of ecclesiology into the conception of his/her studies, to think associatively about the church, about its nature, in an interdisciplinary manner. As the course discusses the understanding of the church in different historical periods and cultures, it develops and encourages the student's differentiated thinking.

The student's knowledge is integrated into his or her thinking and determines his or her basic attitude towards the topics of the course. The graduate will be able to think and decide in an ecumenical spirit about the nature of the church. The graduate has a responsible attitude, is able to take a responsible stance, and is able to make independent decisions on issues related to the subject matter.

Results of education:

Sub-discipline:

Knowledge - skills-attitudes:

Students will learn about the Biblical and Early Church foundations of Christian charity works and will gain insight into the history of professional formation of deacons and deaconesses.

Student will be introduced to the topic of belmission and awakening.

Student will learn about the 19th century Hungarian revival and its achievements.

Student will get acquainted with the situation of the Hungarian Reformed Church in the Highlands between the two world wars and its activities.

Student will gain an understanding of the press perception of Reformed women's roles in relation to the topic.

The students will be able to contrast the classical training of deacons and deaconesses with the current situation, and consequently to assess what new skills they need to acquire in the light of today's challenges.

By learning about the history of the diaconate, the student will be able to draw conclusions about past and present practices of care, thus recognising the social and spiritual needs of the present.

The student acquires knowledge of the history of education in secular and Hungarian aspects.

The student will acquire knowledge of the history of women's education in secular and Hungarian

The skills acquired during the training will not only increase the students' self-confidence, but also their empathic attitude towards the people who will rely on their help.

The student's commitment to the helping profession is deepened by learning about positive historical examples and practices.

His/her ability to recognise needs will enable him/her to create and localise new helping practices.

The student will learn interactively about the diaconate of the Reformed Church - at the individual, congregational and universal ecclesial levels - its history, significant stages, the theological and ecclesiological foundations of its diaconal ministry, its rationale, the structure of its operation and ministry, and possibly about all the major current diaconal projects of our Church.

By working on the topic in a group and through independent research and work, the student will be able to see the structure and essence of diaconal work, its individual elements, will be able to relate the essence of the material to his/her own life and future ministry, will be able to recognize his/her own tasks and areas within the diaconate.

The seminar, the work undertaken and the results of the student's own research will help prepare the student for service, helping to develop a responsible attitude in which the absolute will make an effort to help a community or individual in need.

Number of credits: 4
Recommended semester/trimester of study: 3.
Level of study: I.
Prerequisites:
Conditions for passing the subject: Attending at least 80% of the lectures. Regular reading of the literature. The examination will be in written form preceded by the written preparation and presentation of an essay of one longer (volume-length) and two shorter (essay length) works of (an) ancient philosopher(s) of the student's choice. Assessment: A - excellent (numerical grade: 1) - outstanding performance (90-100%), B - very good (1.5) - above average performance (80-89%). C - good (2) - average performance (70-79%) D - average (2.5) - acceptable performance (60-69%) E - fair (3) - minimum performance (50-59%) FX - unsatisfactory (4) - further studying required (0-49%)
Results of education: The aim of the course is to introduce the student to the history of classical Greek philosophy from Aristotle to Hypatia, i.e. from the 4th century BC to the mid-5th century AD. In addition to the literature used in class, there will be a strong emphasis on the joint discussion of excerpts from the works of various ancient thinkers. The lectures will also help the student to become familiar with the thought patterns, argumentation systems and key expressions of this period, and thus to better understand the philosophical background and often complex interrelationships of the terms and thought processes used in later Christian theology. Through the study of source texts, the student will also acquire skills in textual analysis and interpretation, while learning to navigate the world of ancient thinkers. By comparing different viewpoints, the student will develop comparative skills and the ability to think independently. Types, range and methods of educational activities: Form of study: Seminar Recommended extent of course (in hours): Per week: 1 For the study period: 13 Methods of study: present
Recommended semester/trimester of study: 5.
Level of study: I.
Prerequisites:
Conditions for passing the subject: Participation in lectures and exercises in accordance with the SJE study regulations. Active participation in lectures and involvement in joint work. Regular preparation during the semester. Successful completion of a written test and an oral examination at the end of the semester. Successful completion of end-of-semester examinations in the sub-courses that make up the course. Assessment: Assessment of the sub-courses will be by means of sub-examinations according to the following assessment: A - excellent (numerical value: 1) - outstanding performance (90-100%), B - very good (1.5) - above average performance (80-89%) C - good (2) - average performance (70-79%) D - average (2.5) - acceptable performance (60-69%) E - fair (3) - minimum performance (50-59%) FX - unsatisfactory (4) - further training required (0-49%) The course grade is based on the average of the grades awarded in the sub-courses according to the following rounding system: A = 1,00 - 1,25 B = 1,26 - 1,75 C = 1,76 - 2,25 D = 2,26 - 2,75 E = 2,76 - 3,00 FX = 3,01 - 4,0
Results of education: The material of the semester introduces the student to the methods of diaconia. From a practical point of view, it examines the various processes, stages and elements of diaconal ministry; the question of the person of the deacon, while keeping the theology of practice and the theological background of the deacon in constant view. In this way, the links between concrete diaconal assistance and the other ministries of the Church and the congregation (pastoral care, catechesis, preaching) are drawn out.

The student will be able to recognise the link between the concrete diaconal ministry and its theological essence, thus becoming more effective in solving problems; he will learn to recognise the situation, to evangelise, to start solving the problem and to propose a better solution.

Within the diaconal ministry, he will be able to see the spiritual-theological- logistical-material dimension of the work at the same time.

The student's self-awareness as an absolute deacon-to-be or as a person who also does diaconal work develops, he confronts his own shortcomings, but also recognizes his own virtues which he can put at the service of others; he learns to deal with visible problems on a spiritual level, to solve them.

Results of education: Sub-discipline: Practical Theology in Missiology Knowledge - skills-attitudes: Students will be introduced to the basic concepts of missiology on the Church's soil, but also outside it (e.g. in social institutions) within the terminology and system of practical theology, to the possibilities of mission in different areas (catechetical, diaconal, messianic, pastoral activities), age groups, social strata. Graduates will put into practice their theoretical knowledge in this area.

The student will be informed about the practical issues of the subject and will develop a correct professional view of the purpose of mission, its possibilities and the methods that can be used. They will be able to recognise and evaluate the current situation and, within this, their own tasks, and to consider what they can achieve in their own field from the objectives they have identified. The student will become sensitive to the themes of the subject. He will recognise the needs of the people, groups and denominations around him in the church, in the congregation, where they will carry out their missionary activity in their practice. In this area, they are aware of their own mission and are encouraged to act responsibly in the context of their environment, in order to carry out their tasks for the common good and the development of their surroundings.

Sub-discipline: Seminar in Missiology

Knowledge - skills-attitudes:

This course is designed to introduce students to current issues, concepts of missiology. Students will gain an academic understanding of some of the major concepts of missiology, the main elements of understanding missiology and missionary activity in the works of D. J. Bosch, R. Niebuhr, L. Newbigin. M.W. Goheen.

Upon completion of the seminar, students will have a broad overview of the current state of the discipline.

The student learns to think conceptually, to draw scientific and practical conclusions based on significant and important achievements, ideas and results of the discipline/discipline. He/she will be able to observe, understand and evaluate specific missiological problems and issues from a nuanced and multi-perspective.

The approach of a missiological problem from several perspectives teaches the student to think in a nuanced, synthesizing way and to be open-minded. The seriousness of the topic teaches a responsible attitude in which helping others is a priority.

Sub-discipline: Theory and methods of diakonia

Knowledge - skills-attitudes:

The graduate will acquire a thorough knowledge of the theory of diaconia, the practice of theory and the theory of practice. They are informed about the theological foundations of diaconia and, on the basis of their theoretical knowledge, about the functioning of several areas of practice. He/she will learn about diaconia among different age groups, diaconia with people in different social situations, with people in need, diaconia with alcoholics and drug addicts, diaconia with the sick. It also gives an insight into the ministries of the Western European diaconate in these areas.

The student will recognize the areas of ministry, the possibilities, become sensitive to the subject, become aware of the problems and concerns of the people around him/her, will be able to process them in a system, systematize them and will be able to propose diaconal solutions and take the initiative to solve the problems.

It reinforces the student's personal bias. His attention is focused on those in need and he is available to help those in need with his own resources, methods, attitude, effort and energy.

Results of education: Sub-discipline: Practical Theology in Diakonia Knowledge - skills-attitudes: The student will acquire a thorough knowledge of the practical theological aspects of diaconal ministry, in terms of the concrete realisation of diaconal ministry in a congregation or in the universal Church; the relationship between the different ministries of the Church and diaconal ministry; who is doing this work in the congregation, in the Church, and with what practical theological ecclesiological, ecclesiastic justification and motivation.

The student will be able to see and understand the work of the church, the ministry of the church at the congregational and universal church level. He/she will be aware of his/her own place and role, the challenges, opportunities and tasks that fall to him/her personally in the field of diaconia, and will be able to organise them on the basis of his/her theoretical and practical knowledge and to solve them or propose solutions.

The student's responsibility, responsible behaviour, activity develops in a well-defined area; he understands and realises that he is a member of a community who has to solve the tasks that fall on him, in this case he has to be ready to serve others, to live and serve for the benefit of his community and his environment.

Sub-discipline: Seminar in Diakonia 2

Knowledge - skills-attitudes:

The seminar material builds on the theoretical foundations acquired in the field of diaconia and provides insights into the practical aspects of diaconia. It presents some significant diaconal concepts as illustrations from the history of the universal Church and the Reformation Christian Church in Slovakia, examining systems and concepts that have had a fundamental influence on the direction, methods and approach to diaconia. The semester's material presents in detail some of the important elements of diaconal work (from a practical point of view); examines issues and problems that arise in practice.

The student will be informed about some of the theoretical and practical issues of the subject and will thus develop a correct theological perspective on the purpose and the possible methods of diaconia. He/she will be able to recognise and evaluate diaconal situations and, within them, his/her own tasks, and to reflect on what he/she can achieve in his/her field from the goals he/she has identified.

The student becomes sensitive to the themes that the subject is thematising. He/she will recognise the needs of the people, groups and religions around him/her, his/her own mission in this area and will be motivated to act responsibly in his/her environment and society in order to improve the common good and his/her environment.

Number of credits: 5
Recommended semester/trimester of study: 2.
Level of study: I.
Prerequisites:
Conditions for passing the subject: Sub-discipline: Religious studies 1 and Sub-discipline: Chapters from Philosophy 1 Attending at least 80% of the lectures. Regular reading of the literature. The examination will be in written form preceded by the written preparation and presentation of an essay of one longer (volume-length) and two shorter (essay length) works of (an) ancient philosopher(s) of the student's choice. Assessment: A - excellent (numerical grade: 1) - outstanding performance (90-100%), B - very good (1.5) - above average performance (80-89%). C - good (2) - average performance (70-79%) D - average (2.5) - acceptable performance (60-69%) E - fair (3) - minimum performance (50-59%) FX - unsatisfactory (4) - further studying required (0-49%)
Results of education: Sub-discipline: Religious studies 1 Knowledge - skills-attitudes: Students will gain knowledge of the general issues and concepts of religious studies, when and under what conditions the discipline was founded, the difference between religious studies and theology, as well as religious systems. They will also learn about the original religions of the Americas, Africa, Oceania, ancient Egypt and Mesopotamia, Syria and Palestine, as well as the pagan religions of Europe. The student will gain the ability to identify general issues in the phenomenology of religions and ancient religions. The student will be able to argue for the content of theological and religious reflection in terms of the topic of the semester. The student will be able to justify the application of knowledge from the study of the phenomenology of religions and ancient religions. Sub-discipline: Chapters from Philosophy 1 Knowledge - skills-attitudes: The aim of the course is to introduce the student to the history of early ancient Greek philosophy from the pre-Socratics to Plato, i.e. from the 6th century BC to the middle of the 4th century BC. In addition to the literature used in class, there will be a strong emphasis on the joint discussion of excerpts from the works of various ancient thinkers.

The lectures will also help the student to become familiar with the thought patterns, argumentation systems and key expressions of this period, and thus to better understand the philosophical background and often complex interrelationships of the terms and thought processes used in later Christian theology. Through the study of source texts, the student will also acquire skills in textual analysis and interpretation, while learning to navigate the world of ancient thinkers. By comparing different viewpoints, the student will develop comparative skills and the ability to think independently.

Through an open-minded search for the links between ancient thought and today's worldview, the student becomes increasingly aware of the ever-recurring problems of all-time human thought.

Sub-discipline: Systematic Theology 3 and Religious studies 2 Attendance at lectures and tutorials in accordance with the SJE Study Regulations. Active participation in lectures and involvement in joint work. Regular preparation during the semester. Successful completion of a written test and oral examination at the end of the semester. Passing the end-of-semester examinations in the sub-subjects that make up the subject. Assessment: The assessment of the sub-subjects will be done by means of partial examinations according to the following assessment: A - excellent (numerical value: 1) - outstanding performance (90-100%), B - very good (1.5) - above average performance (80-89%) C - good (2) - average performance (70-79%) D - average (2,5) - acceptable performance (60-69%) E - fair (3) - minimum performance (50-59%) FX - unsatisfactory (4) - further preparation required (0-49%) The assessment of the subject is based on the average of the marks awarded in the sub-subjects according to the following rounding system: A = 1,00 - 1,25 B = 1,26 - 1,75 C = 1,76 - 2,25 D = 2,26 - 2,75

FX = 3,01 - 4,0

Results of education:

Sub-discipline: Biblical Theology 1

Knowledge - skills-attitudes:

The course gives a history of the discipline, a survey of Christian attitudes toward the Old Testament, and provides a summary view of the Pentateuch. Upon completion of the course, the student will have an overview of the theological content of the books of the Torah and the central concepts of the Old Testament.

By completing the course, the student will gain a thorough understanding of the content of the New Testament, the circumstances surrounding the creation of each of the books of the New Testament, the background of New Testament contemporary history, and the religions of the time, which will ensure a proper understanding of the New Testament message.

The student will be able to integrate these into New Testament and systematic-theological contexts. The student will be able to argue regarding the known content of theological reflection on faith in light of the semester's topic.

Upon completion of the course, the student will be able to apply previously acquired knowledge through a comprehensive interpretation of the history of ideas (theology).

By successfully completing the course, the student will develop a framework within which to evaluate the ethical conduct of contemporary society.

By explaining each major biblical story and describing the development of important theological concepts, students make creative use of what they have already learned.

Sub-discipline: Systematic Theology 3

Knowledge - skills-attitudes:

This course provides a comprehensive introduction to systematic subjects. Upon completion of the course, the student will have an overview of basic Christian concepts.

The student will be able to explain and clarify the various, most important Christian dogmas, the most basic concepts of Christian theology.

The student will be able to characterize the content of the theological terms dogma and heresy, identify their distinction, and argue for the content of theological reflection on faith.

Sub-discipline: Religious studies 2

Knowledge - skills-attitudes:

Students will learn about the most important events of Hellenism, its religious culture. They will acquire knowledge of the various mystery religions (Eleusinian Mystery, Cult of Dionizos, Attis and Cybele, Isis and Osiris, Cult of Mithras) as well as the ancient religions of the Greeks and Romans.

The student will gain the ability to identify general issues in ancient pagan and mystery religions.

The student will be able to argue for the content of theological and religious reflection in terms of the topic of the semester. The student will be able to justify the application of knowledge from the study of ancient and mystery religions.
