At least 90 points are required for grade A, 80 points for B, 70 points for C, 60 points for D, and a minimum of 50 points for E. Students who score under 50 points will not obtain a credit for this course.
Results of education: Upon successful completion of this course, the student will be able to introduce and evaluate the advantages and disadvantages of various language teaching methods, as well as to put the most important techniques of these methods into practice.
Brief syllabus: The content of the subject is divided into three main thematic units. The first one addresses the general questions of language teaching: the factors playing important role in language teaching, learning styles, motivation, grouping of students. After discussing the key theories of language acquisition students get familiar with the most well-known methods of foreign language teaching. With the help of short presentations the students become acquainted with the main theories and trends which have played very important role in teaching of English as foreign language for the last 10 years (Grammar Translation Method, Direct Method, Audio-lingual Method, Silent Way, Suggestopedia, Community Language Learning, Total Physical Response, Communicative Language Teaching, Task-based Learning).

Number of credits: 3
Recommended semester/trimester of study: 6.
Level of study: I.
Prerequisites:
Conditions for passing the subject: Two tests will be written during the semester, each with a score of 20 points. The course will end with a written examination, for which the students can obtain 60 points. At least 90 points are required for grade A, 80 points for B, 70 points for C, 60 points for D, and a minimum of 50 points for E.
Results of education: Students, having successfully accomplished this course, will be able to critically evaluate, assess and solve the most frequent problems in modern language teaching. They will be able to apply the techniques required for transferring foreign language knowledge and for developing language competencies. They will be able to construct a methodological model for developing all the language skills and will know how to integrate them in the process of language teaching.
Brief syllabus: The course will start with an introduction to the main models of foreign language teaching and will continue with a detailed analysis of the individual phases involved in these models. Students will become acquainted with various methods with which they can teach new grammatical structures, and they will evaluate and test the techniques with which they can expand the learners' vocabulary. The seminar will also discuss methods with which teachers can effectively ask questions and with which reading and listening skills can be effectively developed. Students will learn different assessment strategies, especially those for oral and written performances.

Students who score under 50 points will not obtain a credit for this course.
Results of education: Having accomplished the course, the student will be able to analyze and evaluate English and American literary works written by the end of the 20th century and in the 21st century and will be able to apply the techniques and methods of the most known literary schools.
Brief syllabus: The main objective of the course is to provide students with relevant information about contemporary British and American literature and help them become able to analyze the selected literary works from the indicated period in detail. Special attention will be paid to the fact that the intensive work with the literary text is more important than the length of the text. During the seminars, students will be working with various techniques of several active literary schools.
